After we sent out the save-the-date message for our Lund conference, we learned that the EACEA will organise a workshop in Brussels, on the very same dates as the ones foreseen for our conference...

The subject of the workshop is:

Recognition of degrees and joint degrees and sustainability of Erasmus Mundus programmes

We made contact with the organisers and they said they (also) aim at gathering (all) EM coordinators. So we turned to our colleagues in Lund to see whether they could consider moving the Lund conference to avoid this overlap.

As a result, we will now host the Conference in Lund on

March 30th, 2012

The aim of the EM-iDEA project is to bring together the community working on projects of EM type, to exchange and to prepare collective actions.

This conference is the second of six regional conferences organised by the project. Four more will be held before July 2013 in Vilnius (13/07/2012), Novi Sad, Valencia and Bordeaux.
You will find information on the conference which was held in Ghent on the project's website, where you will also find our first newsletter. See

http://www.em-concilium.eu

You should consider attending the conferences:

- if you are working on an existing joint programme of Erasmus Mundus type or if you are preparing a new one

- if you wish to meet people involved in the implementation of joint programmes

- if you share the ambition to strengthen the cooperation within the European Higher Education Area and with universities throughout the world

- if you would like to participate in the creation of a structured network of professionals with experience in the development and implementation of joint programmes.

Another announcement will be sent very soon with further information on the Lund conference, including registration and the conference programme. This information will also be available on the project website, along with details of local travel and accommodation, as soon as possible.
